

More Than Words Theatre Company – our 2010.

Martha: We've told people a lot about our accessible resources that we have for people in our presentation.

Mark: The message in "Keep it Simple" was clear, I think everybody got the message about how symbols help people to communicate.

Rob: The work we have done has given us lots of confidence, and I think next year our pieces will be better, and we can advocate for people a lot better. Our new piece, "Operation Communication" will include all the information about how people communicate in different ways.

Mark: More people in day services have seen how good we are. However, there is still a lot of work to be done. More people want to do drama, and people are going to be very excited about what we are going to do next.

Fran: Word of mouth is spreading to the general public about us. It's about how drama and performance helps more people get involved, making connections with our audience. We are looking forward to working with more community groups, with schools and colleges, putting on workshops that we can lead. All of this is in our business plan. We have more volunteers that are helping us become an independent organisation, and working alongside us. There are so many other people on our waiting list who want to become part of what we do. We know that how we work is a good way to teach and train others.

Irene: More Than Words have done lots of good work. We've got lots of messages across to loads of people. Obviously, we need more funding and more organisation to carry on the good work.

Beth: The group, together, works as a team in lots of creative ways, and we always do our best to make it... well... to pull it off. We have been working as a (covert) social enterprise for a while now, putting back into the community. I enjoyed helping to make the Emotion Feast collage, it helps us to explain how each of us is feeling so we can show other people how we put it together, working together. The performances that we do have all been exciting, and I'm really looking forward to the new piece, "Operation Communication". On the dance side, that was really good. The Pussycat Dolls dance and the Then & Now piece dance were highlights. I was thinking that maybe we could work on a new dance piece! ☺

Martha: The projects that we've been doing have gone down really well. They have shown our strengths in numbers. "Fusion" and "Keep it Simple" are a couple of top examples of this in action.
